

Contents

ARTICLES

- Elena Stramaglia 179

“Es gibt keine Universalgeschichte”: Heiner Müller’s Der Auftrag as Critique of Cold War Revolutionary Theory

The article analyzes Heiner Müller’s play Der Auftrag (1979) as a critique of GDR ‘solidarity’ interventions in decolonizing countries during the 1970s. In the 18th-century narrative of three emissaries exporting the French Revolution to colonial Jamaica, Müller inscribes a critique of Cold War neoimperialisms and particularly of the Eastern Bloc’s ambiguous ideological program of ‘exporting the revolution.’ This discourse is framed within a broader problematizing of the European revolutionary tradition and the assimilatory tendencies inherent in its universalism, entailing also a self-problematizing of the socialist intellectual’s position vis-à-vis the emerging ‘Third World revolution.’ The analysis highlights how Müller construes this critique by means of a textual interaction with several politico-literary models pertaining to the European tradition. Finally, it shows how Müller draws from postcolonial literature and theory in parallel as he gestures towards a potential cultural and political alternative model. (ES)

- Jann Duri Bantli und Ansgar Mohnkern 200

Ungeheuer. Zur Unlesbarkeit von Stifters Aus dem bairischen Walde heute

Adalbert Stifter tells stories about snow. Particularly his posthumously published novella Aus dem bairischen Walde makes visible how Stifter holds this element of snow against a domestic world of dwelling in order to cope with the monstrosity (“das Ungeheure”) of snow and to transform it into the experience of the sublime. Under the conditions of climate change today, however, a new concept of monstrosity becomes immanently apparent, as Stifter's representation of snowy landscapes appears to become increasingly unreadable. For today, in the age of climate change, the experience of what Stifter calls "das Ungeheure" paradoxically finds its cause not in an abundant presence of snow, but in its increasing historical absence. This paper demonstrates how this shift has significant consequences for the concept of "das Ungeheure" itself. (JDB/AM; in German)

Meryem Deniz

220

Jean Paul's Acoustic Romanticism and Aeolian Soundscapes in Vorschule der Ästhetik and *Titan

Drawing on Sound Studies, this article explores Jean Paul's acoustic Romanticism, emphasizing the Aeolian harp and tracing the history of its sound in his texts. In Vorschule der Ästhetik (1804), Jean Paul uses the harp's acoustic qualities to differentiate his poetics from that of others. A single elastic string's ability to play multiple tones simultaneously in the wind transforms his perception of the capacity of imagination from one of unison (Einklang) to harmony (Zusammenklang). By interpreting timbre as a medium-specific and emotional quality of sound, this article explores eco poetic affordances of Aeolian tone, illustrating that the specific feeling evoked within the reader by Romantic prose sets it apart from Goethe's plastic style. Testing Jean Paul's conception of harmony against the backdrop of acoustic environments in the novel Titan (1800–1803), I show how Aeolian harp assumes material agency in the plot, evoking ecological and cosmic awareness in the characters. (MD)

Lukas Hoffman

242

Love of Things: Reconsidering Adorno's Criticism of Rilke

Literary scholars often pair Rainer Maria Rilke, long recognized as a philosopher's poet, with different philosophical schools to emphasize novel aspects of his poetics. This paper seeks to highlight the ethical dimensions of Rilke's thing poetry, proposing that the critical philosophy of Theodor Adorno shares structural affinities with Rilke's poetics. This proposition stands in contrast to a large body of scholarship that positions Rilke's aesthetics alongside phenomenologists such as Husserl or Heidegger. Reading Adorno against the grain of his own critique of Rilke, this paper suggests that Rilke's thing poems explore how alienated subjects can ethically relate to their surroundings. The minimal ethics of Rilke's thing poetry ultimately cultivates a critical love of things as a response to the alienation of the modern world. (LH)

James Bade

262

Drifting towards Disaster? Fontane's Ambivalent Portrayal of Stralau Landscapes in His Literary Works

Stralau was a favorite destination for Berliners in the nineteenth century. Best known for the beauty of its surroundings, it was also notorious for the drunken revelry of its fishing carnival. Consequently, in Fontane, Stralau is associated with a remarkable ambivalence of emotions: it highlights the passionate involvement of characters, while also evoking connotations of danger and disaster. A. R. Robinson's description of the protagonists in L'Adultera as being caught in a "drift towards disaster" off Stralau neatly encapsulates the situation in subsequent novels. In Die Poggenpuhls, however, Fontane goes much further. For her painting of the Great Flood for her uncle's church, Sophie takes as her inspiration the view of Lake Rummelsburg from Stralau Station. Sophie's artistic characterization of the diluvian catastrophe expresses her hope that a better world is to follow, reflecting Fontane's utopian ideals in Quitt and Der Stechlin. (JB)

REVIEW ARTICLE

- Carsten Strathausen 276

Kafka's Drawings

(Kilcher, Andreas, Hrsg., unter Mitarbeit von Pavel Schmidt, Franz Kafka. Die Zeichnungen, 2021)

BOOK REVIEWS 294

- Baer, Hester, German Cinema in the Age of Neoliberalism (John E. Davidson) 335
- Breger, Claudia, Making Worlds: Affect and Collectivity in Contemporary European Cinema (Berna Gueneli) 343
- Christians, Heiko, Wilhelm Meisters Erbe. Deutsche Bildungsidee und globale Digitalisierung. Eine Inventur (Gunhild Berg) 348
- Chronister, Necia, Domestic Disputes: Examining Discourses of Home and Property in the Former East Germany (Joyce E. Bromley) 340
- Cornils, Ingo, Beyond Tomorrow: German Science Fiction and Utopian Thought in the 20th and 21st Centuries (Carl Gelderloos) 319
- Criser, Regine and Ervin Malakaj, eds., Diversity and Decolonization in German Studies (Robin Ellis) 302
- Dath, Dietmar, Niegeschichte. Science Fiction als Kunst- und Denkmaschine (Simon Spiegel) 317
- Dürbeck, Gabriele und Christine Kanz, Hrsg., Deutschsprachiges Nature Writing von Goethe bis zur Gegenwart. Kontroversen, Positionen, Perspektiven (Jürgen Goldstein) 311
- Ensberg, Peter, Die Vertikalen im klassischen Horizont. Schiller | Mapplethorpe. Winckelmann | Bernini. Goethe | Faulkner (Peter Höyng) 310
- Ferber, Ilit, Language Pangs: On Pain and the Origin of Language (John K. Noyes) 294
- Florvil, Tiffany N., Mobilizing Black Germany: Afro-German Women and the Making of a Transnational Movement (B. Venkat Mani) 338
- Keppler-Tasaki, Stefan, Wie Goethe Japaner wurde. Internationale Kulturdiplomatie und nationaler Identitätskurs 1889–1989 (Ulrich Johannes Beil) 314

Koepnick, Lutz, Resonant Matter: Sound, Art, and the Promise of Hospitality (Rolf J. Goebel)	301
Korte, Hermann, Minnas starke Schwestern. Bürgermädchen in deutschen Lustspielen 1740–1770 (Joel B. Lande)	308
Landry, Olivia, Theatre of Anger: Radical Transnational Performance in Contemporary Berlin (Katrín Sieg)	346
Lapidot, Elad, Jews Out of the Question: A Critique of Anti-Anti-Semitism (Adam Y. Stern)	298
Loew, Katharina, Special Effects and German Silent Film: Techno-Romantic Cinema (Todd Heidt)	326
McCormick, Rick, Sex, Politics, and Comedy: The Transnational Cinema of Ernst Lubitsch (Alan Lareau)	331
Mehigan, Tim, Robert Musil and the Question of Science: Ethics, Aesthetics, and the Problem of the Two Cultures (Florence Vatan)	324
Millington, Richard, The Gentle Apocalypse: Truth and Meaning in the Poetry of Georg Trakl (Samuel Frederick)	322
Robertson, Ritchie, The Enlightenment: The Pursuit of Happiness, 1680–1790 (Carl Niekerk)	304
Stiasny, Philipp, Jürgen Kasten und Frederik Lang, Hrsg., Ufa international. Ein deutscher Filmkonzern mit globalen Ambitionen (Chris Wahl)	333
Tortolani, Erica and Martin F. Norden, eds., ReFocus: The Films of Paul Leni (Michael Wedel)	328
Urbich, Jan, „Heimwärts kam ich spät gezogen“. Das Subjekt der Heimkehr in Dichtung und Philosophie der Moderne. Eine kurze Problemgeschichte (Martin Klebes)	296
BOOKS RECEIVED	351