Kobi Kabalek is an assistant professor of Holocaust studies and visual studies in the Germanic and Slavic languages and literatures and Jewish studies departments at the Pennsylvania State University.

"A complex and multifaceted understanding of the commemoration of 'rescue' in postwar Germany. This is an important contribution to our understanding of memory—and historiography—as a heterogenous, dynamic tool for understanding and shaping the present. Kabalek shows admirable tolerance for historical gray areas—for accepting ambiguity and flexibility not only in history but also in its actors and their deeds."
